

ABSTRACT

A clamp for connecting bars, and having a body defining at least one pair of prismatic guides for respective bars; and means for locking the bars inside the guides; the body is defined by four sheet metal plates arranged parallel and facing in twos, and connected substantially along the edges of the body; and the guides are each defined by a pair of aligned seats formed along respective sides of two respective facing plates.